

THE PRESIDENT IN OILS. M. A. Rasko, a well known painter of European nobility and American society folk, standing beside his recently completed portrait of President Harding which he painted in the White House. The canvas, the first oil to be made of Mr. Harding, will be hung permanently in the rooms of the Hungarian Republican Club, New York. Union Photo

JOHN B. STANCHFIELD, noted New York lawyer and a prominent figure for many years in Democratic politics, who died last week at his home in Islip, L. I., at the age of sixty-six. Underwood

Right — BOSTON URGINS find the new sprinkler device that the city has supplied for attachment to fire hydrants through the congested sections of the city a welcome innovation these torrid days, but a poor substitute for the ol' swimmin' hole. Underwood

GOING ABROAD. One of the four 6-metre yachts built to represent the United States in a series of races with British built yachts in an international regatta at Cowes on July 29 being hoisted aboard a liner for its journey to England. International

Right—THE TROL-LIBUS, or trackless trolley car, being demonstrated in the General Electric Company's works at Schenectady for the benefit of 200 visiting street railway men. The trollibus, according to railway experts, can be operated at $2,700 less a year than a trolley or auto bus. Note that two overhead wires are necessary, as there is no track to complete the electric circuit. Union Photo

BROADWAY LORELEIL. A quintet of Manhattan chorus lassies give up the stage (temporarily) and become mermaids for a day somewhere on Long Island Sound. Our photographer has snapped them going aloft on Mr. Brokerstreet's yacht to trim the sails. Underwood

"WHO'S AFRAID OF SNAKES?" Pretty Gladys Wilson, one of the Manhattan Girl Scout leaders at the wonderfully attractive summer camp of the scouts at Twin Lakes, Central Valley, N. Y., proves that a full size hog snake has no terrors for her. Girls, how many of you would risk it, even to get your picture in the Sunday rotos? Paul Thompson
